

Sophos gold partnership for Redstone

August 2009

Through its Gold level partnership with Sophos, Redstone Managed Solutions can now offer its customers a wider range of security systems.

IT and infrastructure provider Redstone Managed Solutions has been appointed as a Gold Partner by Sophos, the IT security and data protection vendor.

The appointment comes 18 months after Redstone started offering solutions based around Sophos's cross platform Endpoint Security and Data Protection solution. The new status demonstrates Redstone's significant value and commitment delivered to its customers through deploying Sophos Solutions.

Robert Cavan, Redstone Managed Solutions Managing Director, said: "Being a Gold Partner of one of the world's leading IT security vendors enables us to bring strength in cross platform security, integrated threat management and encryption solutions to all our customers. Whether organisations are concerned about day-to-day operations, business continuity or disaster recovery, a rounded solution can be developed.

"Initially, our work with Sophos involved matching solutions to public sector organisations' requirements including the NHS, local government and education. We have reinforced our commitment and value by extending our professional services and support capability across the Sophos portfolio."

Ciaran Rafferty, Vice President, Country Manager UK and Ireland, Sophos said: "Welcoming Redstone on board as a Gold Partner acknowledges the strong commitment the company shows towards us and increases our market reach. Organisations are facing an increasing range and number of IT security threats, so partnering with an experienced IT provider such as Redstone helps us equip organisations to deal with those threats."
